Moving to San Diego

A Guide to K-12 Education

06JUL09

Welcome to San Diego and Navy Region Southwest

- The School Liaison Officers are in place to serve as the central point of contact between Navy Region Southwest Commands and the school systems in the areas. The School Liaison Officer specializes in serving military students and parents and offers a wide spectrum of services to assist families. Our primary goals are to:
  - Help empower parents with information, giving them a choice in their child's educational future, in turn, making them their child's best advocate.
  - Help communicate with teachers, principals or other school personnel.
  - Help make referrals to appropriate DOE , military or civilian agencies.
  - Help parents in making their child's educational transition a smooth one in and out of San Diego.

Unique to San Diego

As in any area, there are issues and situations that are unique to the San Diego area. Understanding these issues will help you make the best educational choices for your child.

- San Diego has 42 different school systems.
- The different school systems and even schools within those systems operate under different calendars. Schools can be year round, extended year, or traditional.
- The largest system, San Diego Unified, is a school of choice district. This means you do not have to attend the school you are districted to.
- Military housing has been privatized in most San Diego units. This is important to know because it will affect how your LES reads, and MAY in turn affect your ability to qualify for income based programs like Federal Lunch Program and state funded preschools.
- Transportation to and from school is not provided in all school districts. Be sure to contact your child's school to find out about school transportation services.

Shopping for Schools in San Diego County

San Diego has 42 different public school systems, and a variety of private schools options as well. When moving anywhere, you should always shop for schools before you shop for housing!

Step 1: Check out the boundary map on the San Diego County Office of Education Website. school made AYP, and to make sure they are not in improvement status.

http://www.sdcoe.net/boundarymap.asp

Step 2: Visit the "Shopping for Schools Online" link on the SDCOE website to research information about the quality of the districts and what they offer. Information is available on private schools on this site as well.

http://www.sdcoe.net/shopping.asp

Step 3: look for housing in an area where you found schools that will meet your child's needs. Lincoln Housing lists the schools that services their housing areas on their website. You will still need to check the boundaries map as some housing units are served by more than one school!
http://www.lpcmil.com/Installations/naval-complex-san-diego/

Step 4: Go back to the SDCOE website once you have suitable housing. Type the address in the boundary map to get your exact school.

http://www.sdcoe.net/boundaries.asp

Step 5: Check the specific school(s) on Ed-Data or Great Schools. Look specifically to see if the school has met AYP.

State Attendance Policies

- Good attendance is very important to your child's success at school and good attendance habits should be formed early.
- California Education Laws require students to attend school regularly and punctually and holds parents accountable for ensuring their children follow the laws. The State recognizes on the following types of absences:
  - Acceptable – verified illness, medical appointment, jury service, funeral for immediate family member, court appearance, and religious holiday
  - Unacceptable – missing the school bus, truancy, oversleeping, ditching, cutting class, or any other self-initiated absence (i.e. comp leave)
- Ask the school about enrolling your student in Short Term Independent Study for expected absences of 5 or ore days to avoid loss of academic credit.
- Contact your child's school about any concern regarding their attendance. In all instances, it's generally a good idea to write down the name and position of the person you spoke with as well as the time and date in case questions should arise later
